Shriver profiles woman living 'Paycheck to Paycheck'

By Jay Bobbin

Maria Shriver may not be a television news regular these days, but her interest in the world around her hasn't lessened.

Maria Shriver is executive producer of "Paycheck to Paycheck: The Life & Times of Katrina Gilbert," airing Monday on HBO.

The NBC News special correspondent likely would contend it only has increased, given her role in such initiatives as "The Alzheimer's Project" — the award-winning HBO documentary largely inspired by the experience of Shriver's late father, politician and activist Sargent Shriver, with the disease — and her recently issued Shriver Report (available at www.shriverreport.org) subtitled "A Woman's Nation Pushes Back From the Brink," about women and children living on the poverty line in modern America.

Related to the report is "Paycheck to Paycheck: The Life & Times of Katrina Gilbert," a documentary executive-produced for HBO, where it debuts Monday, March 17 (and will be offered free the following week at HBO.com, ShriverReport.org and YouTube.com). It follows a single mother of three in Chattanooga, Tenn., as she tries to provide for herself and her young children as a nursing assistant while trying to better her situation.

Shriver recently talked about the effect she wants the program to have not only on viewers, but on legislators who can impact the issues it addresses.

Q: Are you happy with the documentary?

A: First, I'm really happy that HBO wanted to partner on the subject. I think Katrina's story exemplifies all the issues we talked about in the report, so you see a real life that all the poll numbers and graphs depict. You see what happens when someone is trying to live off the paycheck they're working hard for, and they can't make ends meet.

When they want to go back to school, what happens? When they want to have the father involved in their children's lives, what happens? You also see how hard it is to be economically mature, and I feel good that the film presents a look at an issue as it comes together.

Q: How did you discover Katrina?

A: ... We looked at several people, and the filmmakers felt Katrina was the best example of everything the report covered — women who started out in relationships and never thought they'd end up as single mothers do; they're trying to keep a job, and they're trying to balance services with a certain amount of the money.

Library to Hold Registration for Various Programs in the Children's Room

Mayor Mark A. Smith announced that the Bayonne Public Library will have registration for Parent/Toddler Time and Preschool Story Time. Registration for these programs will take place starting Monday, March 17, at 9:30 a.m., through Friday, March 21, or until these programs are filled, whichever comes first. The library will start registration each day at 9:30 a.m. All programs take place in the Children's Room in the public library at 31st Street and Avenue C. The Spring Session for these programs will begin on Tuesday, April 8.

The library also announced another season of the Lapsit Program, which requires no registration. The Lapsit Program is for children 18-24 months of age. This program takes place on Wednesdays from 11:00-11:30 a.m. The Lapsit Program includes reading stories, singing songs, and playing with toys. Parents must stay with their children for this program.

Parent/Toddler Time is for children 2-3 years of age. Parents stay with their children during this program. It takes place on Tuesdays at 10:30-11:00 a.m. and 11:30 a.m.-12:00 Noon. Parent/Toddler Time includes stories, songs, and arts& crafts projects.

Story Time takes place on Wednesdays at 1:30-2:30 p.m. This program is for children aged 3-5 years old. This program includes reading stories, singing songs, and making arts & crafts projects. The library asks that parents be certain that their children are ready to attend the program by themselves. Parents cannot stay with their children during Story Time, but must remain in the library building.

These programs fill up quickly, so the library urges parents to register early. Parents can register their children in person in the Children's Room at the library. Proof of the child's age and the family's Bayonne residency are required at the time of registration. These programs are open to all Bayonne residents in the appropriate age categories.

'Glee' marks 100th episode as some familiar faces return

By Jay Bobbin

For its 100th episode, a certain series is offering a story expectedly filled with "Glee."

Familiar faces will be back to celebrate the Fox musical comedy-drama's milestone, to be shown in two parts starting Tuesday, March 18. Gwyneth Paltrow and Kristin Chenoweth reprise their recurring guest roles, and former cast regulars not seen on the show as often lately — including latest "Dancing With the Stars" winner Amber Riley, Mark Salling, Dianna Agron and Heather Morris — also return as the now-dismantled New Directions glee club is recalled by its members.

"It's crazy," muses co-star Chris Colfer about reaching the 100th story of the show that counts creators Ryan Murphy, Brad Falchuk and Ian Brennan among its executive producers. "In some ways, it feels like it's only the 10th episode, but in other ways, it feels like it's the 1,000th episode. I'm kind of surprised that we've hit 100."

Indeed, Colfer — Emmy-nominated twice as Kurt Hummel — maintains that with the musical and dramatic demands of "Glee," he and such peers as Lea Michele, Matthew Morrison and Jane Lynch have "always been in the eye of the storm, so we've never been able to have a great perspective of it all. A hundred episodes means, what, something like 3,000 songs? I think by the time the show ends next season, we will have done every single song in existence."

Remixes of fan-chosen tunes previously performed on "Glee" are woven throughout the 100th tale. Colfer is pleased that "pretty much anyone who's ever been a part of the show has come back," though it's also a bittersweet occasion with the absence of the late Cory Monteith, who played Finn Hudson.

Colfer reflects that Kurt's personal growth on "Glee," and his own, have "probably ruined every other job I'll ever have. This was really the first job I had in film or TV, and for it to be so significant, I've been completely spoiled. I still get a thousand letters a week from kids out there who have been affected by Kurt's story."

That story has expanded with Kurt's move to New York, though his Ohio home base never will be totally in his rearview mirror.

"His family is in Ohio," Colfer notes, "so I know he won't completely abandon it, but he's kind of living it up in New York. He's working for Vogue, which is where I had always joked I wanted to see him, but I never thought it was going to be a possibility. Much like the actor who's playing him, he's getting to stretch his muscles."

Still, certain aspects always will be part of Kurt, as Colfer hopes they will be for himself.

"I've always thought singing is one of the best tools an actor can use to get an emotion across, because you just can feel the hurt or longing or happiness. I'll have to figure out what tools to use in whatever my next gig is."

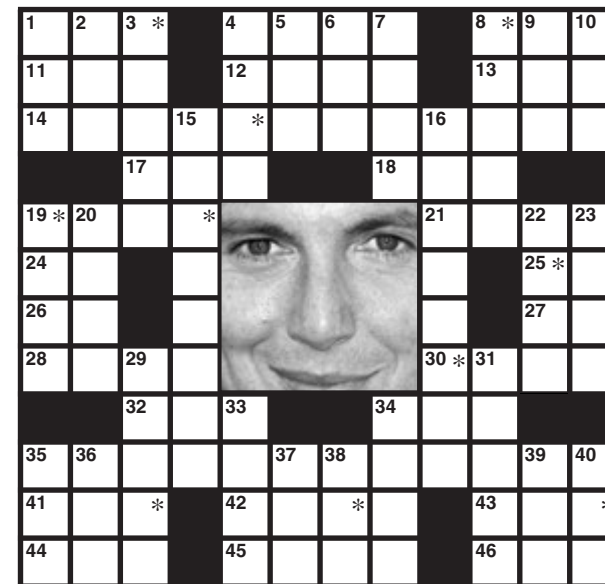

A winner of a Golden Globe Award, two People's Choice Awards and two Teen Choice Awards for "Glee," Colfer hasn't put much thought into the show wrapping up — not yet, anyway — with its forthcoming Season 6.

"I think that to the outside world, (the remaining) season and a half isn't that much," he says, "but there's so much work that our show requires, that still seems very much like an eternity for us. That still means at least 200 to 300 more musical numbers and lots and lots of 80-hour weeks, so it doesn't seem like it's ending too soon for anyone on the set."

Chris Colfer

When you think landmarks in Bayonne think Naples Restaurant and Pizzeria. This year Naples is celebrating its 64th anniversary. It all started on 30th Street and the Boulevard by Margie and Johnny Shynne along with Lou Mongelli. Years later they moved their restaurant/pizzeria to 43rd Street and Broadway for 21 years. The last stop in 1977 to the present is their location at 191 Broadway where Marge Howlett, daughter of the Shynne's who has been a part of the team for 38 years still remains the owner.

That's 64 years of continuity and they are acknowledged as one of the finest pizzerias in town. Just a couple of weeks ago Naples came in 1st place in the Bayonne Pizza Challenge for the best thin crust pizza. Naples has survived for so long a time because they offer fresh food with real home-made cooking that comes from their kitchen at affordable prices. And Marge Howlett owner, kneads the pizza dough by hand. No machine here.

Another thing that is nice about Naples Restaurant is the fact that you can relax in comfortable booths and enjoy the companionship of family or friends while dining on your favorite Italian foods. Choose amongst other special dishes here, the fresh mussels cooked to perfection and hand cleaned; the tasty mozzarella sandwich, great salads, delicious buffalo wings and a large menu of pastas, chicken, shrimp and eggplant, all created for you.

Naturally, who can forget the overall favorite at any Italian restaurant, and that is pizza. The choices here are quite varied, and you can literally choose whatever ingredients you want, so as to make it your own personal pizza. Whether it be thin crust, or thick at your request, every bite turns out to be a wonderful experience. They cater, and they do it well. Naples is closed on Tuesdays, but is opened Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 4 pm to 9 pm. Sundays they are open 3:00 pm to 9 pm.

Marge would like to take this opportunity to thank all her customers for their patronage for all these years. It is a testament to the warmth and friendship that has been generated by all. She also hopes that you will all spend many more years to come enjoying the same great food and friendly service.

MTV puts on the feed at the Woodie Awards

Anyone who has ever cooked for a dinner party knows the essential ingredient is planning.

Imagine cooking dinner for 5,000 and the planning that requires. Mackie Gmitter, executive chef at the Austin, Texas, barbecue eatery The Salt Lick, is gearing up to cook for attendees at Woodies, a music festival that's part of the city's South by Southwest fest.

The awards ceremony from that festival, the 2014 mtvU Woodie Awards, airs Sunday, March 16, on MTV and mtvU. A few weeks before acts took the stage, Gmitter's menu was set.

"It is a bit of a challenge cooking for this amount of people for the Woodie Awards," he says. "We need to be a lot more prepared. The first chef I worked for always told me, 'If you are not two days ahead, you are one day behind.'"

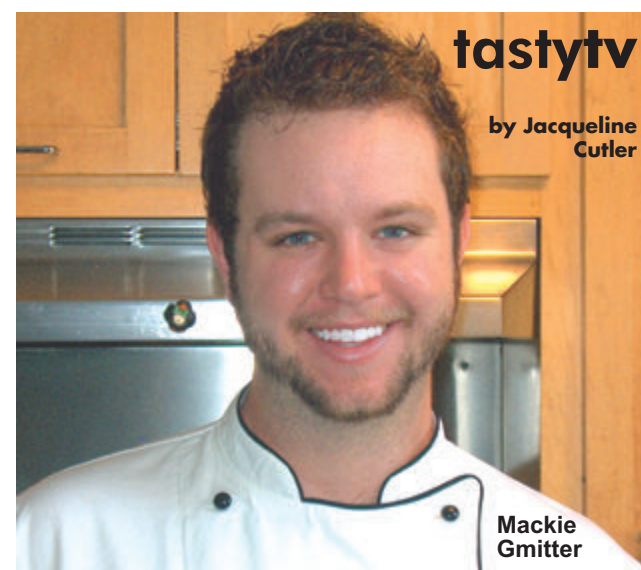

Gmitter and his team begin preparations by making sauces and seasoning meat. This is the third time he's cooking for the Woodies. He's making chopped brisket sliders, smoked turkey sliders, pork ribs, coleslaw and Hatch green chili mac and cheese.

He is also planning "sloppy nachos," and considering regular ones are not the neatest food, these must be something special, with smoked Gouda and a few other cheeses and chopped beef.

His crew makes corn and flour tortillas on site, which gives them, Gmitter says, "that unique flavor. Nothing store bought. You can taste the difference in the first bite."

His coleslaw includes jicama and apple with bleu cheese and sweet corn. "It complements the smokiness and tanginess of barbecue," he says.

Like all barbecue restaurants, The Salt Lick has a secret sauce. "Our barbecue sauce is much different than traditional barbecue sauce in Texas," says the Texan. "It's a noncook barbecue sauce. Ours is mustard-based, with a good amount of sugars in the spice mix as they smoke. The sugars start caramelizing on the ribs or pulled pork, and we serve our barbecue sauce with the meats as well."

What did you have for dinner last night? "I was hanging out with a couple of co-workers, and we decided to do something a little different. We did a seasoned fried chicken, sweet potato waffles and honey bacon whipped cream."

What is always in your refrigerator? "It just depends on the seasons of the year. It could be fresh fruit to a really good sale on steaks at the market. Anything I can find at the farmers market."

What's the one food you hate cooking? "Being a foodie and someone relatively new in the culinary world, if I had to pick a least favorite, it would probably be seafood."

What is your next project? "Growing the brand. We do have Salt Lick Cellars, about 25 acres of vineyards on the property. We are doing our own wines. I have collaborated on a menu for the Salt Lick Cellars and (am) making at breads and steaks in wood ovens."

WOLFGANG PUCK'S KITCHEN

Make a traditional St. Patrick's Day dinner in record time with a pressure cooker

By Wolfgang Puck

St. Patrick's Day is almost here, a day when everyone Irish loves to celebrate their heritage - and everyone else who isn't, including myself, enjoys feeling as if they are. Of course, a lot of attention is always paid to the drinks involved in that celebration. But I, of course, think more about the food.

One of my favorite foods to cook and eat for St. Patrick's Day is traditional corned beef and cabbage. It's one of the most delicious and satisfying home-style main dishes I know, a comforting and nourishing combination of lean brine-cured beef brisket, slowly braised in broth (and beer, of course) with a generous assortment of vegetables, including big wedges of cabbage. For a holiday that comes a few days before the official end of winter, it perfectly bridges the two seasons, warming and filling at a time when days can still be a bit nippy, and yet offering up a bounty of fresh produce along with the protein.

Cooking corned beef and cabbage, though, can have its challenges, the biggest being how long it can take to simmer that big piece of meat to absolute tenderness - generally, a good 3 hours for a 3-pound brisket. I've heard some home cooks complain that sometimes even that much time isn't enough, and I've known other cooks who get impatient and wind up serving chewy meat.

I've discovered, however, a simple solution to ensuring not only perfectly tender meat but also to achieving it in record time: Use a pressure cooker. With one of the easy, safe and reasonably priced electric pressure cookers available today (including my own brand, though my recipe will work with any of them), you can make perfect corned beef in about an hour and a half of cooking time, plus the extra few minutes it takes for the cooker to come to full pressure beforehand and then let pressure release naturally after cooking is done.

Even better, cooking under pressure helps to break down the meat fibers for absolutely fork-tender results, and it concentrates the flavors of meat and vegetables like nothing else I know. Follow my recipe here, and you won't believe how delicious the results will be.

Let me offer one important tip for success, though. It's essentially that you don't quick-release the pressure at the end of cooking, as the sudden change can tighten the meat's muscle fibers. When cooking is done, be sure to unplug your cooker, too, while pressure releases slowly; that way, if your model of cooker includes a warming function, it won't affect the pressure change.

Give my recipe a try, and you'll never want to cook your corned beef - or other braised meats - any other way. Have a fun St. Patrick's Day!

PRESSURE COOKER CORNED BEEF AND CABBAGE Serves 6 to 8
3 pounds whole packaged uncooked corned beef brisket, including its seasoning packet
2 bay leaves
1 medium head green or white cabbage, cored and cut into 8 wedges
4 medium organic Yukon gold or other

yellow-fleshed potatoes, scrubbed and cut in half lengthwise
4 medium organic carrots, trimmed, peeled, and cut into 2-inch chunks
2 medium yellow onions, trimmed, peeled and cut into 4 quarters each
4 garlic cloves, unpeeled
12 ounces lager-style beer or pale ale
2 cups organic beef broth

Mustard and prepared horseradish or horseradish cream sauce, for serving Unwrap and drain the corned beef. With a sharp knife, carefully trim off excess fat. Rinse the beef with cold running water.

Put the corned beef in the cooking chamber of the pressure cooker. Sprinkle it with its seasoning packet. Add the bay leaves.

Arrange the cabbage wedges on their sides evenly around the corned beef. Evenly place the potato halves, carrot chunks, onion quarters, and garlic cloves among the cabbage wedges.

Pour the beer and the broth over the ingredients.

Secure the lid of the pressure cooker, locking it in place following the manufacturer's instructions. Close the pressure release valve.

Turn on the pressure cooker. Once it has reached full pressure, set a timer, either on the machine or separate from it, to cook under pressure for 90 minutes.

At the end of the cooking time, turn off the machine and also unplug it. Leave the pressure release valve closed, letting pressure release slowly on its own, about 10 minutes.

When pressure has returned to normal, carefully unlock and remove the lid. Transfer the corned beef to a cutting board and, with a sharp knife, cut it across the grain into thick slices, arranging them on a heated platter with the vegetables or in individual heated shallow soup plates. Moisten the meat and vegetables with the cooking liquid and serve immediately, passing mustard and horseradish on the side.
